H. KEARNEY LOST AT SEA

With Companion Daring Aviator
Goes To His Death.

MADISONVILLE SOCIETY GIRL

Named As Beneficiary Of His Will, But Denies Reported Engagement—Pontoon
Of Air Craft Found.

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 16.—Searchers put to sea today in the hope of finding further trace of the missing aviator, Horace Kearney and Chester Lawrence, a newspaper man, who sailed Saturday for an over-water flight to San Francisco, and are believed to have been lost at sea. The finding of one of the pontoons of Kearney's hydroplane confirms the belief that the machine met with serious accident, and it is believed here that both men were drowned in Santa Monica Bay, somewhere off Point Dume.

The pontoon was found floating South of Redondo Beach. It was towed ashore by David Clark in a power boat. The pontoon was identified by C. H. Day, who fitted the pontoons to Kearney's machine. The steel support that held the pontoon to the wing of the air craft was broken off. From this, aviators here believe that for some reason, possibly engine trouble Kearney was forced to alight in the water. A thirty-mile gale was blowing, and it is believed that the waves wrecked the machine.

Although there is little hope that the two men in the machine reached shore, search is being made in the foothills of the Malibu mountains that border the coast of Point Dume. It was stated here that Kearney was engaged to Miss Louise McPherson, of Madisonville, Ky., and named his hydro-aeroplane "Snookum," after his pet name for her. It is also said he made a will, leaving part of his estate to Miss McPherson.

MISS MCPHERSON DENIES ENGAGEMENT

Madisonville, Ky., Dec. 16.—Miss Louise McPherson, a beautiful 18 year old society girl of this city, denied that there was an engagement between herself and Kearney. "We are only friends," she said. "I met him when he was flying at the fair here in July and he has been to see me several times since. But nothing but friendship existed." She expressed great surprise on learning that he had made her one of the beneficiaries of his will. She refused to say whether she would accept the benefits under the provisions of his will.—Henderson Gleaner.

SMALL HOPE FOR 'OST MEN

Aviators Who Disappeared in the Pacific Are Dead Unless Picked up by a Ship

Los Angeles, Dec. 16.—Only the faint hope that they might have been picked up by an outwardbound vessel not equipped with wireless is attained by friends of Aviator Horace Kearney and his passenger Chester Lawrence, automobile Editor of a local newspaper, who are believed to have lost their lives while attempting a hydro-aeroplane flight from Los Angeles to San Francisco. The entire coast from Point Firmin to Ventura has been covered by searchers hoping to find some trace of the missing men.

No Alarm Given By Young Lady In Idle Hour Theatre

To correct the part "understood" in the announcement of the alarm given in the Idle Hour Theatre, for the benefit of the young lady of whom it was said, "Unthoughtedly rushed in and gave the alarm." No alarm whatever was given. The young lady in question quietly walked in and said to an especial friend, "Dr. Balaquin's office is on fire," in words not audible to the person sitting in the next seat. The trio deliberately walked out without the least excitement, and the only "alarm" was the imagination of the audience, which proved to be quite correct.

Mrs. Iva Owen

In memory of Mrs. Iva Owen, the wife of Lem Owen, who died at her home in Herrin, Ill., December 12, 1912. She was born at Hecla, Ky., September 1, 1878. She leaves a husband, four children, a mother, father, one sister, two brothers and many friends to mourn her loss. Mrs. Owen was for many years a member of the Methodist Church and was a consistent Christian and one who bore the love and respect of all who knew her. She had a pleasant smile and a kind word for every body, but that smile will greet us on earth no more pleasure, only blooms to die forever.

A precious one from us has gone
A voice we love is stilled,
A place is vacant in our hearts,
Which never can be filled.

God in his wisdom has recalled,
The bloom his love had given,
And the body in slumber lies
The soul is safe in heaven.

Dearest Iva how you suffered
Till God called you from your pain,
To that bright, holy mansion
Thro' endless years with him to reign.

O, dear Iva, how we loved you,
But Angels loved you more,
And they have sweetly called you
To vander shinning Shore.

The golden gates were open,
A gentle voice said, come,
And with farewell's all unspoken,
She calmly entered home.

O, how sadly do we miss her
No earthly tongue can tell,
But in heaven we hope to meet her
Where no farewell tears are shed.

Deep not dear husband, children and friends, but be ready to meet her when cometh the end.

Remember it is God who giveth and who takes, and those who sleep in death shall some day be awake.

The figures showing value of the farm products of the United States for the year 1912 are enormous, the total being estimated at $9,500,000,000—if you can grasp what that means. Perhaps it is clearer to state that this means $100 per capita for every man, woman and child in the United States, or something near three times the per capita of money in circulation. And all this wealth produced in one year by the farmers. Certainly our farmers should be comfortable as a class, and their wares should be marked down to a point to reduce the cost of living.

Some one has said that one of the principal reasons for the high cost of living is that so many persons have the price. That is but a terse way of saying that we could generally practice more economy if our own individual demands and standard of comfort would permit. And there is certainly much truth in the saying.

Robert Fendwick formerly of this city has been appointed R. R. Agent for the Texas Road at Brandenburg Ky., and has a fine position there his many friends here will be glad to hear of his good luck.

Ballard's SNOW LINIMENT

Is the Right Remedy for All Abrasions of the Flesh.

If the wound is cleansed and the liniment applied promptly, the healing process begins at once and the wound heals from the inside outwardly, thus performing a perfect cure that leaves no scar. If the wound is on the outside too quickly, pus forms under the surface and breaks out into a running sore that is hard to cure and inevitably leaves a bad scar.

Owners of blooded stock prefer this liniment to all others for that reason, and they use it not only on fine animals, but on human flesh, as it does its work quickly and thoroughly.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Faj's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surface of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Tend for circulars and testimonials.

Four Hundred Dollars Lost

Only a few days ago the story came in that a man living a short distance in the country had $400.00 stolen from him. This man lost his hard earned money because he had more faith in his trunk than he did in the Bank. He lost his money and is fortunate that he did not lose his life.

How long will you risk your money and valuables at home in a tin box or an old trunk when it would be perfectly safe here and we rent you a deposit box for your valuable papers in our modern burglar proof safe for a small amount.

Your money will be here when you want it and instead of laying around home where it is in a continual risk it will be making money. Think this over, Then bring your money to this bank and start a bank account.

When you do this you can pay all your accounts by clerk which is safe and business like and will obviate the necessity of asking for a receipt.

Write Ideas for Moving Picture Plays

YOU can write photo plays and earn $25. or more weekly.

WE WILL SHOW YOU HOW!

If you have ideas-- if you can THINK--we will show you the secrets of this fascinating new profession. Positively no experience or literary excellence necessary. No "flowery language" is wanted.

The demand for photoplays is practically unlimited. The big film manufacturers are "moving Heaven and Earth" in their attempt to get enough good plots to supply the ever increasing demand. They are offering $100. and more, for single scenarios, or written ideas.

Nearly all the big film companies, the buyers of photoplays, are located in or near NEW YORK CITY. Being right on the spot, and knowing at all times just what sort of plots are wanted by the producers, our SALES DEPARTMENT has a tremendous advantage over agencies situated in distant cities.

We have received many letters from the big film manufacturers, such as VITAGRAPH, EDISON, ESSANAY, LUBIN, SOLAX, IMP, REX, RELIANCE, CHAMPION, COMET, MELIES, ETC., urging us to send photoplays to them. We want more writers and we'll gladly teach you the secrets of success.

We are selling photoplays written by people who "never before wrote a line for publication."

Perhaps we can do the same for you. If you can think of only one good idea every week, and write it out as directed by us, and it sells for only $25., a low figure.

You Will Earn $100. Weekly For Spare Time

FREE Send your name and address at once for free copy of our illustrated book, "MOVING PICTURE PLAYWRITING"

Don't hesitate. Don't argue. Write now and learn just what this new profession may mean for you and your future.

time if you had just seen the—turkey girl.
"Pretty?" Godfrey's tone was indignant.
"So much so that I had fairly to drag Jim away when I took him with me to select our turkey."
"Perhaps," Godfrey suggested, meekly, "it would make the girl's Christmas more happy if the stone happened to be hers and was returned to her."

"Your Christmas spirit is very commendable," Mary put in dryly.
Godfrey laughed and took the stone from his mother. "Where is this turkey farm, Sis?"
"On the old farm road—you can't miss it."
Nor did Godfrey miss the little farm that stood like a fairy picture among groves of fir trees. The tiny cottage and outbuildings were of pure white and with their heavy thatch of snow there among the crystal hung branches of giant fir trees that were wonderful. Godfrey felt like a trespasser in the realm of fairies.

The impression was not withdrawn when the door of the cottage swung open. The Fairy Queen stood there, but she was not the sprite-like vision of dreams; instead, she was the embodiment of life and thrills and joy. Godfrey was decidedly disconcerted, but the girl's smile, together with her words, drew him within the tiny cottage. Outside all was white; inside all was suffused by the red glow from an open fire.

The girl's gentle voice broke Godfrey's very evident confusion.
"Did you want to inquire about turkeys?" She motioned him to the big low chair by the fire. In so doing, Godfrey caught sight of her left hand.

Willing to Please.
"During an anti-fry campaign," writes E. K. O. to the Cleveland Plain Dealer, "one of the teachers in our public schools urged the children to bring in all the flies they could capture. The reward was to be ten cents a pint. On the following day the schoolmarm was astonished to get this question from one of her small charges: 'Teacher, we ain't got no flies at out house. Will bedbugs do just as well?'"

Air Flight for Consumption.
If you have incipient consumption—take a flight in an airship. Doctor Fleming, an eminent authority on tuberculosis, lecturing before the Berlin Aeronautical association, described the benefits of high altitudes upon those afflicted, and asserted that fifteen minutes' exposure to the sun's rays during an airship flight at high altitude was certain death to the bacilli of tuberculosis.

Many Deadly Weapons.
Some persons attribute all crime to the pistol, forgetting that history tells us that more crimes were committed in the world before there were pistols. What is to prevent a person murderously inclined from obtaining and using a carving knife, an ice pick, an ax, or hatchet, a razor or baseball bat? These all make deadly weapons.

By Installments.
The "epoch-making advice" of a bookmaker to a colleague in distress is related in Vanity Fair. The colleague had been paid $25 on a bet by a certain captain, who, in a fit of absent-mindedness, paid him the same amount again next day. "What shall I do about it?" asked the bookmaker of his friend; and prompt came the answer: "Ask him for it again."

Had Kept Her Bargain.
An ingenious trick was recently played on some women of Maukjanj, Madras, India. They handed sums of money to a woman who said that she possessed the power of doubling the contents. The victims had their packets returned to them after seven days, when the silver coins they had contained were found to have been changed into copper ones.

Good Never Dies.
There is nothing, no nothing, innocent or good that dies and is forgotten. An infant—a prattling child dying in its cradle—will live again in better thoughts of those who loved it, and play its part through them, in the redeeming actions of the world, though its body be burnt to ashes and drowned in the deepest sea.—Charles Dickens.

Probably What He Wanted.
The following was one of King Edward's favorites: "A very well-known K. O. sent to an eminent physician and surgeon, who is a familiar figure in Portland place, the following wire: 'My wife's mother is lying at death's door. Will you come around and try to pull her through?' It is a true 'true story,' as Miss Mar declares, and the physician did pull her through to—health."

Chronic rheumatism contracts the muscles, distorts the joints and undermines the strength. A powerful penetrating and relieving remedy will be found in BALLARDS SNOW LINIMENT. It restores strength and suppleness to the aching limbs. Price 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Sold by St. Bernard Mining Co. Incorporated, Drug Department.

Woman Given High Position.
In Switzerland a woman has been appointed to the chief inspectorship of factories, a coveted position hitherto held only by men. This appointment is the outcome of a special commission which met to inquire into factory conditions of the various cantons. Owing to the great increase of women in industrial life the desirability of a woman as chief inspector was unanimously agreed upon by the commission.

Foils a Foul Plot.
When a shameful plot exists between liver and bowels to cause distress by refusing to act, take Dr. King's New Life Pills, and end such abuse of your system. They gently compel right action of stomach, liver and bowels, and restore your health and all good feelings. 25c at all druggists.

Worried Hero.
A critic of Wells' novel, "Marriage," finds in the confounding of the hero "the desire to have it all ways; to possess a woman who shall have all the charm and the caprice of the eternal feminine; who shall, by the grossness of her desires and the pettiness of conversation, give him an agreeable sense of superiority, and yet shall, to order, acquire deep spiritual insight when her husband feels he needs it."

Owing to the unqualified success of "The Balkin Princess" both in London and New York, local lovers of high class amusement will be pleased to learn that this pre-eminent musical success will be seen at Madisonville Wednesday Dec. 11th. The presenting company is unusually large and includes most of the original members and the famous Balkan Beauty Chorus.

Politics.
By placing the proper number of coins in the slot the political machine may be operated.

Pathetic Appeal.
Among the clever stories retailed at the Beefsteak or the Garrick is a nice one of the florid lawyer, who was counsel in an action for libel brought by a provision merchant against a local newspaper. He said in his address to the jury: "My client, gentlemen, is a cheesemonger, and the reputation of a cheesemonger in the city of London is like the bloom of a peach. Touch it, and it is gone forever."

Heartburn is a symptom of indigestion. Take a dose of HERBINE in such cases. The pain disappears instantly. The bowels operate speedily and you feel fine, vigorous and cheerful. Price 50c. Sold by St. Bernard Mining Co. Incorporated, Drug Department.

Steel Stays Stopped Bullet.
Steel stays have saved many a woman's life. Not long ago Mary Hennessy was taken to Bellevue hospital with a flesh wound in the side, and Dr. Drury discovered that had it not been for a steel stay which deflected the bullet the wound would have been fatal, for the slug had been traveling toward a vital organ.

Bad taste in the mouth is removed with a dose of HERBINE. It sweetens the stomach and purifies the liver and bowels. Price 50c. Sold by St. Bernard Mining Co. Incorporated, Drug Department.

Learning by Love Letter.
"Love letters between young men and women are an excellent method of teaching literature," says Dr. Arthur Holmes. But it must be done tactfully. We have known a young lady who broke off an engagement because her fiance returned her love letters with the spelling errors neatly corrected in red ink.

"I suffered habitually from constipation. Doan's Regulents relieved and strengthened the bowels so that they have been regular ever since."—E. Davis, Grocer, Sulphur Springs, Texas.

London Largely Built on Marsh.
Abundant evidence as to the marshy nature of the ground upon which a large part of the city of London was originally built is still to be discovered in such names as Fenchurch street, Flinbury and Moorfields.

For any itchiness of the skin, for skin rashes, chaps, pimples, etc., try Doan's Ointment, 50c at all drug stores.

Willie Wise.
Sunday School Teacher—And what should we do after breaking a commandment, Willie? Willie—Muzzle de papers and hire a good lawyer.—Life.

CLUBS WERE TRUMPS

FROM JUDGE.

He looked like a gentleman gone to seed. Though patched and frayed as to clothing, he was immaculate both in dress and person. He sat upon the kitchen doorstep, shelling peas. His expression betokened reconciled despair.

"Be so kind," he said meekly, but emphatically, "as not to utter the word club to me, sir. The inducements that could tempt me to join any kind of association whatever do not exist."

Before saying more, he glanced apprehensively over his shoulder. Then he explained in a low tone:

"To clubs are due all my misfortunes; and I endure sufficient, I assure you. When I was a young man—and that seems centuries ago—this village passed through an epidemic of clubs. How or why the pestilence broke out, no one knows. But suddenly every one was forming them, joining them, canvassing for them. There was the Farmers' club, the Housewives' club, the Card club, the Glee club and a score of others. Every organization had its badge, and some of my neighbors proudly wore five or six.

"At that time I was just young enough to know all about life, and I was certain that it offered no prize like personal liberty. Consequently I was a confirmed bachelor—and rather prone to boast of it, I fear. My associates were all young men who proclaimed loudly that they scorned the female sex. Each had been most cruelly rejected by some false-hearted charmer, and when they organized the Bachelors' club the receipt of one rejection at least was made a qualification for membership. I was eager to join, but this excluded me.

"Isn't there a way to get around the rule?" I asked Lon Pendleton, president.

"No," he replied. "We mustn't begin that way. Don't try to get around it—just qualify."

"Propose to some one?"

"Certainly."

"Suppose I am accepted?"

"You needn't be afraid of that," he replied; then, noticing my look, lamely added, "select some one who doesn't like you, I mean."

"That was easily done. Selma Briggs and I had been sworn enemies since we went barefooted to the district school. She was bigger than the teacher then, and I called her Jumbo. She retaliated by calling me Whiffet. The years that had added to her bulk and coarseness had left me undersized, but a gentleman and (hom!) a scholar."

He sent a quick, sensitive glance into my eyes, and I bowed gravely.

"Whenever we chanced to pass on the street, she would make some audible remark about me, to raise the laughter of the congenial friends around her, and her vulgar laugh would raise above them all and follow me farthest."

"Loathing her as I did, nothing except my great desire to join the Bachelors' club could have made me address her—let alone upon such a subject. But in those days when I wanted a thing I went it blind, as the saying is. Moreover, I was sure that Selma would consider my proposal a joke—perhaps the result of a wager—and this I knew would enrage her beyond measure."

He was silent so long, gazing miserably into space, that I was obliged to speak to him. He looked up pathetically and whispered:

"She said yes."

"And you?" I ventured.

"I am a gentleman," he returned, and I nodded.

"If it isn't—er—" I began, after a long pause.

"Not at all," he answered. "She was mad to join the Matrons' club, that's all."

Before I could utter a word of sympathy, an untidy head appeared at the door and a coarse voice cried:

"John Hennery, be them peas done yet?"

And as I passed through the gate I heard in gentle and refined tones:

"No, Selma; they'll be done in a minute."

Wife Who Is Past Redemption.

"Dar ain't no hope for muh wife," with a downward inflection remarked old Brother Roorhack. "De lady is gone headed straight for de Pitt o' Tawment, and dar ain't no resumption for her. She's gone!"

"She's a Campbellite, sah, whilst I's a shoutin' Meferdist, mubsef. Well, dis mawnin' at breakfast we got to 'sputin' 'bout de merits o' dem two creeds, and I says: 'W'y, loozy, yuh, Lady! 'As a mattuh o' fact dem fetch-taked Campbellites ain't got no sense, and I kin prove it!' She was uh-pou'in' de syrup on her huckwheat cakes at de time. 'If dey had any sense dey wouldn't be Campbellites!' says I. And how did she answer the sockdolager? Huh!—she grabbed up dem cakes wid de syrup on 'em and slapped 'em in muh face! Yassah!—slung de whole drippin' bizness right smack in muh countenance! And I kin gwine to show her de urror o' her ways no mo', needer. She's dess hatter go down to dot pit widout muh 'sistence; and I hopes 'twill be a lesson to her, too, sah!"

Wonder What Made Her Do It?

"A very singular incident happened at the theater last night."

"Yes? What was it?"

"A beautiful girl came in wearing a gorgeous gown."

"But what was singular about that?"

"Why, she came in fully fifteen minutes before it was time for the show to begin."

CANDY BY THE BARREL

If candy makers had to depend on men consumers instead of upon Cupid and the kids, there would be great failures in saccharine circles—but there is one time of the year that my masculine sweet-tooth asserts itself and then, instead of yearning for the chocolate-cream confections or the fruit dips, it clamors for a big bag of mixed candy, right out of the barrel!

I admit it is a plebeian taste, that the candy is mostly glue and flour jumbled to suit the taste of the adolescent—but somehow I cannot feel that I have rightly celebrated Christmas without this bag of candy. When I was a boy this is the sort of candy we got and the taste was early acquired. And what a lot of anticipation there was in eating the stuff—anticipation because when you stuck your hand in the sack for a sweet bit, you never knew whether it would come out clutching a lemon-drop, a caramel or a peppermint!

And, too, the candy was cheap. You could get a big bag full of it for ten cents—and some of it was red and some white and some yellow and there were sugar hearts with mottoes on them and nice round marble-balls with nuts in them and funny animal shapes that tickled—and oh! heaps of interesting things in that Christmas sack of candy.

This was the same kind of candy we got sewed up in red mosquito-bar sacks at the Sunday school Christmas tree festivities, along with the nuts and the popcorn balls.

And now, man that I am, I cannot get across the Rubicon of Christmas without sauntering down to the candy store and asking for a sack of candy "out of the barrel." Invariably the candy man will tell me he has much better candy and look at me in a surprised sort of way, but I know what I want when I want it—and Christmas is the time.

How about you? Haven't you a sweet tooth left for the old-fashioned candy?

CHRISTMAS WITH "DAD" AS THE GOAT

By BYRON WILLIAMS

Along about October 1 when the granaries of the world are full to bursting and the cellar is so cluttered up with coal and preserves that the maid cannot reach the laundry taps without stumbling over the snowshovel, somebody says something about Christmas and gives father heart disease. All summer "dad" has been wrestling with the problems of business—this was presidential year, and everybody had to have vacations and Billy & Jones started in direct competition and—oh, the dickens knows what!

And now he has to face that Christmas thing again!

The list is a mile long and father knows it will put a crimp in his bank account amounting almost to cramp, but mother says it will have to be added to, if anything, so there!

But somehow as I look at "dad," I cannot restrain from asking:

"Why should father be the goat?"

It wasn't so in the days when I was dreaming of a wonderful career in letters. Everybody worked on Christmas presents then and father was not called upon to settle the Christmas bills for all the family. I made a "corner-copia" (We don't spell it now the way we pronounced it then) for mother. She knitted some socks for me. I rigged up a shaving-paper outfit for pa and he gave me a perfectly good twenty-five cent jack-knife. I made a wood box for the neighbor's wife and she sewed me a pair of mittens. Everybody made things in those days. For weeks before the holidays, mother worked every night on Christmas gifts, and she was as happy as could be doing things for those she loved. Into the fabric of what she was sewing, she put the love and affection of a great heart—and all of us did the same.

And I'll leave it to you—didn't the things we got in the old days, the presents we made ourselves for each other, come nearer exemplifying the true Christmas spirit?

Of course they did!

And father did not have to dig down in his pocket and pay for two hundred and fifty-seven presents, two hundred of which are given just because somebody else gave un something and got on the confounded list!

I'm for Christmas—but I like the old-fashioned observance best. It isn't observing the "peace-on-earth" spirit to load "dad" up with so much debt that he can't crawl out in five months. Better take to wood boxes and cornucopias.

THE LAND OF CHRISTMAS TREES

The express wagon is backed to the grocery store entrance and the driver, assisted by the grocer's boy, begins to unload Christmas trees. Soon the walk is cluttered with them and the passerby, catching the spirit of the tree, smile at the children gathering round. A light snow is falling and the green of the spruce is inviting, to say nothing of the reason it has come to town.

What a lot of Christmas trees the grocer has ordered—and yet how few compared to the many thousands that grow in Christmas Tree Land, away up north. Up there the woods are full of Christmas trees and the snows are so deep that snowshoes may be necessary. And in Christmas Tree Land there are vast stretches of nothing but evergreen trees and white snow—and in the snow, if you are versed in woodcraft, you might find the track of a deer and innumerable trails of Brer Rabbit, leading away through the greenery to the quiet, vast places.

Probably you pay $1 or more for a Christmas tree. Up north they are free, but the hardy men who gather them must wade in the deep snow and draw them many miles to the railroad that they may be shipped to the little boys and girls of the city.

And as you sit beside your tree, with your heart glad and your spirits gay, you might ponder on how that tree got to you. You can picture the vast snow field and the forest with the December sun shining on it, shedding jewels of light. A squirrel is floundering about in the snow trying to locate some buried nuts and a blue-jay is scolding saucily from a maple tree hard by. And then, into the quiet comes a man. He is a sturdy man with a woolen cap drawn closely over his ears and nose. There are silts for his eyes. On his feet are great woolen packs with rubber shoes and his trousers are tucked inside the packs. His coat is very odd, to you, consisting of a great, bright sweater sort of garment, buckled closely around him. On his shoulder he carries an ax. He begins to cut Christmas trees and the one you have in your home is a very pretty one that pleases him as he hauls it away to where his team awaits. With many other trees your tree is put on the sled and after a time, is hauled to the depot where it is shipped to your grocer.

The man who cut it was no doubt a lumberjack and if he is like his kind, he lives in a log cabin with his wife and children. In the olden days he worked in the timber exclusively, but now he farms during the summer on a wee farm that he is clearing of stumps, and in the winter time he cuts wood for the lumber companies.

And his little ones always have a Christmas tree, for Christmas trees are free where he lives, but probably it is not as plentifully loaded with gifts as yours, for which you should be very thankful.

MISS MYRTLE'S STORY

By FLORA DELL.

"Yes, I have had one strange experience," Miss Myrtle smiled reminiscently, as the girls pleaded for a story. "Myra, a school chum of mine, wrote for me to visit her at her hotel home in the west, and tired with my social duties, I accepted. On the journey I pictured her in the ordinary country town hotel; antique accommodations, fat, half-headed proprietor, cold baths from a water pitcher, and sundry other unpleasant features.

"Imagine my amazement on my arrival, after Myra's cordial reception, at being received in an exchange almost luxurious in appointment, supplemented by the most up-to-date sleeping apartments, private baths, push buttons and all modern conveniences. I retired early the first night in order to secure a long rest, and be prepared for the pleasure of the next day. I drew a long sigh of comfort as I nestled down between the cool, clean sheets and prepared for a night of sound sleep. I think I had just lost consciousness when I awoke with the sensation that some one was in the room. I was not naturally nervous, but the feeling that now had me in its grip was one of distinct fear. When fairly awake I bounded out of bed, snapped on the electric light and made a hurried survey of the room. With the full return to consciousness I became aware of a soft sound, like deep, regular breathing, a strange, elusive sound, seeming at one minute behind me and the next to come from the center of the room. Completely baffled in my efforts to locate it, I began to think I was the victim of some practical joke, or else suffering from an unusual attack of indigestion. Deciding that the latter was not probable, I went back to bed, determined to finish my rest; but even with an effort to drown the sound by hurrying my head in the sheets, I could still hear the regular movements, sometimes low and soft, and again seemingly labored and right over the head, as my fevered imagination clothed it in various impossible shapes.

"I cannot tell how long I lay nervously wakeful, when I suddenly saw a soft ray of light on the window frame, and the sweet twitter of a bird on a tree outside my window appraised me of the approach of dawn, and with other welcome indications of approaching morning I lost the sound and my fear of it and drifted into a heavy sleep.

"The next day I decided to say nothing about my experience, as it might bring ridicule upon me, and I passed a pleasant day with the decision firmly rooted of banishing the whole affair from my mind. I retired after a jolly evening, ready to laugh at my experience of the previous night.

"Whether the subject refused to be dismissed and my mind dwelt unconsciously upon it in my slumbers, I do not know, but about midnight I found myself once more sitting upright in the bed, clutching the bed clothing tightly and listening to the same deep, regular breathing of the night before.

"Once more I brought the electric light into play; once more made a determined detour of the room, when suddenly—as it my imagination, or had the breathing really assumed a different tone? It seemed to be coming in gasps—like the last labored breath of life—it seemed close at my back. I made one leap toward the door—the gasping sounded in my ears. With a spasmodic grip I turned the handle and slipped into the wide hall. Myra's room was down the corridor, and I flew toward it, but had gone but a short distance when a hand gripped my shoulder, and I fell in an unconscious heap—at Myra's feet.

"When I came to I was on her bed and she was bathing my face with a refreshing lotion. I remember murmuring, 'What was it?' and then I sank, partly from exhaustion, partly from a sweet sense of security, into a sound sleep, from which I did not awaken until morning."

Miss Myrtle ceased speaking, and for a few moments there was an intense silence. At last the girls asked in chorus: "Aren't you going to tell us what it was?"

"Oh," said Miss Myrtle, and a little smile crinkled the corners of her mouth, and an amused twinkle shone in her brown eyes. There was another short silence, and then she said: "Have you ever heard of a water motor?" She laughed softly. "I never had then, but I decided that even if I had been brought up in a city, there were a few things yet to be learned."

Death of Youthful Japanese Emperor.
According to a Spanish writer on Japan, the most pathetic suicide recorded in the history of that country took place over eight centuries ago.

"In 1181," writes Senor Gomez Carrillo, "the nine-year-old Emperor Koto-toku saw his troops defeated. The child disheveled his hair, wept copiously, and invoked the holy name of Buddha. When he had finished his nurse Nildono took him in her arms to the seashore. 'There is a lovely city beneath the bay,' she said, and then the waves covered the emperor and his nurse."

Expensive.

"How often is your motor overhauled, Binks?" asked Dusenberry.

"Four times last month," said Binks.

"Four times in one month? Gee—salen! what for?" demanded Dusenberry.

"Speeding," said Binks. "Twice by the bicycle cops, once by a d putz sheriff, and once by a plain, common garden, village constable."—Judge.

THERESA'S PLAN WON

By HARMONY WELLER.

Theresa had never, during her twenty-six years, done anything of which her parents might disapprove.

Tawny of hair and with great smoldering brown eyes, the girl could be either a saint or a sinner, but as it happened Theresa had chosen the former.

"But now," muttered Theresa while she watched a great automobile whirling out of sight along the dusty road, "I am going to turn sinner. I simply must know that good-looking man who has just passed by in his motor. It is positively wicked that a masculine person should be so much alone—not to mention feminine ones." Theresa sighed, and her eyes absorbed the vast beauty of the farm upon which she had been spending the summer.

"I believe," she ruminated, with a shy, sweet smile, "that I could really love—him, if I only knew him."

Then, out of her strong desire to become acquainted with the man who twice daily whizzed past the farm house on his way to business in the city, Theresa formed a plan.

During the afternoon when every one about the farm was either sleeping or busily engaged, Theresa made her way to the thicket of fir trees. Once within the shelter she drew from her ample pocket three empty ale bottles which she had secured from the kitchen. A moment later she had broken them into jagged pieces and put them into a cigar box. Making her way stealthily toward the barn she next added a score of thin rusty nails to her box and some sharp steel filings.

"Surely some of these will puncture at least one tire," was the thought centered in Theresa's mind while she made her way back to the house. She put her treasure within the thicket of vines that clustered over the porch then swung herself into the big hammock to await the twilight hour.

"He generally passes about 7:30," she decided before slipping off into a short nap.

It was the toot of the motor horn far in the distance that awakened Theresa. She jumped up hurriedly, picked up her box of evil looking glass, nails and filings and stole swiftly down to the roadside. With trembling fingers she strewed the contents of her box across the width of the road and tossed the box into the hedge.

After a triumphant little glance at her handiwork she sped quickly up the path and into the house. Breathless and guilty she watched the approaching motor from her window among the roses.

As the car drew nearer Theresa felt a cold chill run down her spine.

"What if anything should happen—and he should be hurt?" she whispered to the roses. She had prepared herself in a way for the report of a punctured tire but was not listening for the terrible explosion of all four of them.

She fell back against the wardrobe in her room and could not summon courage to look out and see the result of her endeavor.

Down in the road a man was muttering short, improper words. He was standing beside his big motor car, the tires of which were all as flat as a piece of linen. Twilight had fallen with swift wings and the road was no more than a road.

And through the soft twilight Theresa heard her father's voice in conversation with the man of the motor.

"We have food and beds to spare," her father was saying. "Come in and spend the night with us. We are always glad to welcome a stranger at our table."

"O, how glad," murmured Theresa. Her heart was beating now with the success of her scheme and her cheeks were flushed. There was something hidden in the depths of her eyes and as she descended the stairs perhaps the saint and the sinner were oddly combined. Theresa felt very much like the sinner as she found herself looking into John Ridgeway's eyes.

"It is strange," he was saying, "that I have gone over this road twice a day for two years and this is the first time—" He stopped short, whether from the effect of Theresa's blush or the curve of her lips he knew not.

"I have not lived here so long," she said and the meaning beneath was of course lost to John Ridgeway. "It is fortunate that the accident to your tires happened when you were near a house," she added.

"Very, very fortunate," Ridgeway said and the true meaning was not lost upon Theresa.

"I knew I would like him," she told herself with an inward chuckle.

"I suppose you will never use this road again," Theresa suggested with a demure raising of the lashes.

"On the contrary," laughed Ridgeway, "it may be that I will give up business entirely and take to driving back and forth in front of this most delightful farmhouse."

It was not until after dinner when her father and Ridgeway were having a smoke and her mother was reading that Theresa found time to slip off unobserved. Out into the darkness she sped with the great kitchen broom trailing behind her. The night was black but she had no difficulty in finding the rough scattering of glass on the road. With a firm swing of the broom Theresa swept that trail of her guilt out of the sight of men.

Ridgeway glanced up as Theresa entered the room.

"I would have broken a million bottles," she told herself with happiness, "just to see that expression in his eyes."
